Collaborators/sources	Impact on your assignment
Chris	Figured out why my output messed up when the leverl is larger than 1

Your work must be your own! You may work with your peers or consult other sources to better understand the tools you are using, to clarify course material or the assignment, or to discuss general problem-solving strategies. Please cite any sources of help you have consulted and briefly comment on the impact they had on the development of your solutions (you do not need to cite the textbook or the professor but please do cite help you obtained from the tutors).

You may not collaborate directly on developing solutions, code, or write-ups (unless otherwise specified). You may not turn in someone else's work as your own, or provide your solution/code to someone else (in any form). If you are found to have received (or given) inappropriate assistance and have not cited it, you will receive a failing grade in the class. If you are temped to cheat, make an appointment for help instead!

I affirm that the above is an accurate description of aid I received on this assignment.
